Username and Email Address Fields Now Optional for Add New Staff Process

Administrators are no longer required to fill in the Username and Email Address fields when adding a new staff member to their organizations. These fields continue to be marked as required (display the red asterisk *) but are now optional if the Grant Login Privileges checkbox remains deselected. The information below clarifies the application's behavior when the administrator adds a new staff member:

- If login credentials are not required for a new staff member, the administrator should leave the Grant Login Privileges checkbox deselected and save the record with the Username and Email Address fields empty. The system creates no login and sends no login credentials to the new staff member.

- If login credentials are required for a new staff member, the administrator should select the Grant Login Privileges checkbox, enter values into the Username and Email Address fields, and save the record. The system creates a user login and emails the login credentials to the new staff member.

IQ Query Result Sets Sometimes Missing Redesigned Offering Data After Migration

Some users reported that after a data migration from Family Suite Offering to Isidore Offering, queries that pulled data from both the Contributions and Batches columns were missing results. Specifically, their result sets included data from Family Suite Offering but no data from the redesigned Offering application. This issue was resolved. Queries that pull data from both columns now output complete and accurate results.
